"WHERE LAW ENDS TYRANNY BEGINS"
WILLIAM PITT

DEDICATION

Utopia—far-distant realm of Poet and Philosopher alike, how varied are your guises; how many-sided your denotations. You are an Island Elysium, shrouded in the mystery of individual desire—no two men have ever described you in exactly the same way.

Since the beginning of time, the idea of a universally "perfect place" on earth has captured the imagination of man. Utopia, the name given to this earthly paradise, is instinctively pictured as a pleasure-misted landscape where spirited souls are free to roam.

Baring the Utopian conception of its unquestionably lovely but unreal romanticism, it is easy to see that nowhere does there exist a universal Utopia. Each man is searching for, and will be fulfilled in, a separate and individual Utopia. Moreover, this Utopia is not the final and glorious epicurean-sort-of-heaven it is most often believed to be. Rather, it is a many-branched road, the traveling of which is in itself its own "reward."

We, the graduates of 1958, are taking our first decisive steps along this road. It is to this "Search for Utopia" that we dedicate our senior yearbook.

Principal's Message

On Memorial Day the eyes of the nation were turned toward the Tomb of the Unknowns, in Arlington National Cemetery, where the Unknown Soldiers of World War II and Korea were laid to rest beside the Unknown Soldier of World War I. We have no reason to believe that these were men of wealth or prominence, leaders in government or business, the arts or the professions. It is reasonable to assume that they were ordinary people, like most of the people whom you and I know. Yet the highest officials of our government went to Arlington to honor them, and every year many thousands of Americans will pay homage at their tomb.

In making national heroes of men who in themselves had no claim to fame or distinction, we recognize the importance in our national life of ordinary men and women —the great mass of the American people. Without them our country could not survive in time of war. Neither could it thrive in time of peace. Ours is a complex society whose operations, in peace as well as in war, require the cooperation and the contributions of large numbers of people, working together. Our future as a nation depends on the skill, the devotion, and the wisdom with which we carry on our daily tasks.

As young adults, you will soon assume your responsibilities as American citizens. Each of you has an important part to play. Play it well. And may you have good health, good fortune, and success in the years that lie ahead.

ISAAC HERSH

Dear Seniors:

The past year has gone so quickly. For most, it has been filled with happy memories. To many, reaching the senior term has been a dream, and like most dreams, hasn't lasted very long.

We have had many eventful activities—the Celebrity Dance, Senior Show, Senior Dance, and the Prom—to name just a few. All were extremely successful. This can be attributed to the fine group of students elected as class officers and their cabinet. A great deal of careful planning was needed at all times.

As your adviser, I wish to thank all seniors for their cooperation throughout the term. May your experiences at school prove helpful to you from this point on. The very best of luck and happiness to you all, and someday when you recall your high school experiences, I hope they will be truly pleasant memories.

God bless you all.

Sincerely yours,
JACK GORDON

TO THE TEACHERS

The good that a good teacher can accomplish, the audience that he or she may reach, is immeasurable and unlimited. The teacher is a stimulator of thought, one who helps to organize and clarify his student's beliefs so that he may see them and re-examine them in a clearer light. He is the bridge between his student and a world to which the student has yet to be exposed.

We, at this time of our departure, pause for a moment to reflect upon our teachers — people who have influenced and guided us, and have given of themselves unselfishly, so that we may gain a surer footing on the road that we are about to travel.

The teachers who appear on the following pages, just a small part of the group to whom we are grateful, are representative of the New Utrecht faculty.

Statistics

Ever since poll-taking first blossomed out under the tutelage of Messrs. Gallup and Roper, the general public has become increasingly number-conscious. Suffering an awareness of the power of numbers, we deemed it only proper to include a few of our own statistics. Having no feasible means of collecting our information accurately, we decided to do the next best thing and collect it inaccurately. This was easily accomplished by collaring some of our more devoted staff members and suggesting they visit each senior prefect with a questionnaire. After many return visits, much deliberation and calculation, we arrived at the following figures:

Heading the call of the Ivy Brick, armed with diploma and carryall, 310 of the seniors are college-bound . . .

39 others, imbued with intense feelings of patriotism, are planning to join the armed forces . . .

Members of the Gray-Flannel-Suit-branch-of-society, can expect 254 new trainees come June . . .

Washington Square Park will boast 13 additional easels beginning this summer . . .

'Neath the arched and drooping canopy, 21 "I do's" will be repeated in the near, near future . . .

28 of the seniors are marching determinedly toward a life of test-tubes, alpha particles, and fungi . . .

Grease paint and bright lights have attracted 13 of the graduates . . .

58 students, eager for perennial communion with chalk dust and apples, plan to become teachers.

In preparing for that same jungled world of gray felt and flannel, 181 seniors will attend business and vocational schools . . .

Dressed in white, replete with stethoscope and thermometer, 10 girls and 15 boys walk proudly into the world of medicine . . .

Finally, there were those unburdened souls (17) who listed themselves under the heading of "Happy Wanderers." . . .

LITERARY SECTION

Time, thought and the beauty of centuries have been captured and preserved by the power of words. These words are the means whereby one can experience an intimate contact with all aspects of life.

I, A Utrechtite

I remember, and I look back upon my years at New Utrecht . . .

A SOPHOMORE—New and groping, I was trying to establish myself in this strange place that I was to become a part of. I was full of wonderment; harassing experiences were adventures; everything I discovered was significant and I tried not to lose any of it. Each person I met became a friend, another inhabitant of my new world. I was impressionable;my emotions (usually joyful ones, but sometimes tearful too) were almost unrestrained. I whirled through a year with enthusiatic abandon—in my schoolwork, studying, and extra-curricular activities. Imagine!—I even enjoyed cleaning off tables for sophisticated seniors, if my position as a lunchroom monitor demanded it. Sing was instituted at New Utrecht, and I felt certain that "The School of Oz" would win. But my excitement was not lessened by our (the sophs') loss. I attended a football game and stared in utter wonderment while shivering violently in the 25-degree cold. I followed our victorious basketball team to Madison Square Garden and rejoiced extravagantly after their triumph. (Their eventual defeat didn't really trouble me.) I attended the varsity show, "You Can't Take It With You," and laughed uproarously at the antics of the Vanderhof family, all the while feeling proud of my fellow-Utrechtites on the stage.

A JUNIOR—More firmly established, no longer mystified by the school, I had found a place for myself here, amongst friends. I was determined not to let this year be routine, just an interval between firsts and lasts. It, too, had to be something special. And then I realized that it was. I was making important decisions about my course of study, choosing electives with only my own rather uncertain ambitions and my grade adviser's persuasive words to guide me. While becoming more strongly a part of New Utrecht's community, I was also gaining a significant measure of independence. In addition I decided to which activities I would devote the largest portion of my after-class time. If a choice of mine proved unwise I tried to change it, or, at least, do better the next time.

A SENIOR—Confident, noticeably enthusiastic though under a cover of nonchalance, I was awaiting graduation. As befits a natural feeling of triumph, the senior "gods and goddesses" won the sing. Then, after a while, I began to become absorbed in senior activities. Pins, hats, jewelry—all symbolic of my eighth and final term—were here. I filled out a COMET questionnaire, exchanged pictures with all my friends and chatted with them about the senior celebrities. And there was the sequence of events that I had anticipated for so long—celebrity dance, boat ride, senior day, prom, and, finally, graduation. Each was exciting, vital, and memorable; each served to bring me closer to the senior class and to the school I was to bid good-bye.

Yes, now I recall all these things and I'm sure that I will always be able to summon them, just as clearly, to my memory.

PHYLLIS BARTEL

Retrospect

The weary Utrechtite at last has reached the end.
He's toiled for days and months and years his ragged marks to mend.
And now he holds his head up high, and walks with swaggering gait
And cries aloud for all to hear, "I am a graduate!"

Does he remember long ago when he was just a "frosh"?
He passed through Utrecht's somber halls amazed and screamed, "My Gosh!"
He bought an elevator pass and ticket to the pool,
Was shocked by the dishonesty—"Those seniors broke the Rule!"

As a soph he took his place among his fellow men;
His heart was glad, his homework long, and cutting was his yen.
He traveled home each afternoon and, jostled from his dream—
Mid screaming, shoving subway-ites—said, "Great practice for the team!"

Then after months of feverish work he came into the light;
He had the morning prefect now and things would be all right.
Now came physics and history and formulas galore.
("What were the basic causes of the Peloponnesian War?")

Then a year had passed, and times had changed; math and bio were a breeze,
The senior found himself thick in extra-curricular activities!
The patient teachers tried and tried with supplication and persuasion
To make the students tackle soon the formal college application.

The weary Utrechtite at last has reached the end.
He's toiled for days and months and years his ragged marks to mend.
And now he holds his head up high, and walks with swaggering gait
And cries aloud for all to hear, "I am a graduate!"

SHIRLEY KLERER

Heaven Was Never Like This

Everyone knows you can never tell what college boys will come up with next. Even so, it was a great surprise to us when my brother decided to room with some friends of his at school. We were told that as far as lodgings were concerned, they had discovered a "find." My brother described in detail the spacious rooms, modern conveniences, and—the low price. It was a palace—Their Heaven. We were skeptical at first, but after a while, we gave no more thought to the apartment

About the middle of the semester, I asked my brother if I could see the "palace." He agreed, but said he would have to tell the others of my visit in advance, so that they could "clean it up a little." Knowing how my brother keeps his room at home, I felt that this was not an unreasonable request.

The day finally arrived. I was a bit uncertain when we stepped into the elevator on the ground floor of one of New York's dirtier buildings. It was a self-service elevator, and I was quite surprised when my brother, the master of the situation, pressed the "down" button. As the car began its descent, I wondered if I was dreaming. I wasn't. The elevator door opened to reveal a narrow, almost Middle-Age-Castle-type passageway. I didn't think five-watt bulbs were being manufactured any more, but that seemed to be the strength of the bulb that lighted this hallway. Maybe this was because of the dirt that was encrusted around it. We might have been walking down an airy breezeway for all that it bothered my brother. He whistled merrily as he put his key into the lock and opened the creaky door.

We entered and my brother proceeded to show me around the rooms. It was then that I learned that their four spacious rooms had dwindled to three. (The vacant fourth room boasted a ceiling that was fast shedding its coat of plaster.) In the living room, my attention was attracted by the elaborate decorations on the walls. Colorful mats were hung there to serve three purposes: first, as ornaments; second, to camouflage the cracks; and third, to keep the plaster on the walls. The last was the most important reason. The remaining wall space was covered with an assortment of photographs—mostly of females.

My brother then led the way to the most important room of all—the kitchen. He paused to show me the exotic touch they had added to their doorway—a bamboo curtain that served as a separation between kitchen and living room.

Once inside the kitchen, my brother eagerly described its marvels to me. He pointed out the piano—well, better in the kitchen than nowhere—and explained that they now could have dinner music. And they could have—especially if the piano had had keys. The stove was very interesting and looked as though it might be used for cooking. Its main drawback was that a leaking water pipe ran directly over it. This wasn't too serious as the boys did not eat in frequently any more. At first they felt that they could economize by buying a week's food at once. But they soon realized that this plan never works out if you eat all the food the first night.

Just at this time the heat began to come up—I mean down. Don't ever let anyone tell you that basement apartments don't get heat. Since there was no window that opened onto fresh air, I had to content myself with taking as few breaths as possible.

I guess I just don't appreciate the "finer things in life" because I had had enough of "the palace" by now. As we walked back through the dark hallway once more and into the self-service elevator, I wondered how the boys could enjoy their apparent bliss in this dungeon. The elevator rose higher and higher and higher, and I gripped my stomach, fearing an attack of "the bends." As I stepped into the bright sunlight, I breathed a sigh of relief. Heaven was never like that.—Thank goodness!

We, the Seniors

There was a time called matriculation
When all was strange, huge, and foreboding
When the other people had towered above us.
But we were victorious in the fight for survival
And now we are the towers.
We look down—way down.
We see that all does not go well below us.
We have learned the pitfalls of our place of learning.
We laugh as the "younger ones" fall into them.

We dare not drop even the paper from a straw
Onto the floor of Dr. K.'s Elevated Eatery.
It's true we won't be made to wash dishes,
But there are other punishments
Whose offices are on the second floor.

We dare not cross the first floor without a pass
In front of Messrs. S. and W.,
Who, we have found, spend comparatively little time
Operating a food concern.

Our whistles have been generously wetted
Invariably with water at sub-freezing temperature
From the twenty-one-by-sixty-foot water-hole
Deep in the dark and dingy depths of our schooi.
We have learned to accept graciously
The apparel required by Mrs. S. and Mr. M.
For even bathing suits with well-placed holes and patches
Are better than nothing at all, girls.
Just ask the boys.

By habit, we stand at but one flip of the hand of Mr. C.
In the assembly.
We do not wear jackets in the balcony
Of the assembly,
If we, the seniors, want to be sure we reach
An assembly
In the month of June.

CHARLES DEBER

Time Suspended

She glanced at the luminous dial on her wrist as the escalator slid soundlessly to the platform below. Six o'clock—less than an hour . . . She stepped off the stairs, which immediately disappeared into the floor, and walked quickly to the opposite end of the platform. A row of oddly assorted machines stood there, each with its blinking, bubbling argon sign and flamboyantly plainted facade. She placed a coin in one of them, pushed a finger-contoured button, and waited. The machine suddenly became alive—throbbing and whirring and clicking. From its mouth there appeared a crisp paper container of scalding hot, de-caffeinated coffee, complete with a sugar substitute and de-fatted milk.

She finished her drink just as the Car, a black, segmented caterpillar burst into the station. The doors opened. She stepped in and they closed noiselessly behind her. She eased herself onto a simulated-leather covered seat as the Car began to roar through the dark passageway. She looked at the other passengers; they were listlessly reading the newssheets or staring blankly at the advertisements which screamed loudly to Buy, Install, Use.

LIFE GETS EASIER ALL THE TIME . . .

Wearily, she turned her eyes toward the window where she looked upon a black wall—an abyss—infinity . . .

The Car sped along its rails and time seemed to be suspended, hanging precariously from a fine silken thread.

She felt that the Car was now traveling upward and it suddenly burst into the open and the late afternoon sunlight. She caught a glimpse of green tender-fresh shoots of new-born green. And then the Car, unnoticing, plunged into the darkness and sped on.

But the green returned again and again. It haunted her with its cleanness, closeness to the earth. It was real—not a part of the subtle nightmare she had been living. The thread snapped. Her weariness fled and she felt as fresh and clean as the grass itself.

The Car slowly ground to a halt—the last stop in the City. She stepped from the Car and rode the escalator to the surface. The sun had already been swallowed up by the horizon and the shadows, gray-purple and strange, deepened. She walked the brief distance to her apartment along the dusky street. The faint realization of something which she did not understand, had begun to form itself. She felt that it was important.

Once in the apartment she showered, dressed quickly and then sat waiting in the cold hard light of a fluorescent lamp. She did not wait long, however, before the buzzer announced his arrival. He entered the door looking scrubbed, brushed, and impeccably dressed. Politely, assuredly, he asked what she would care to do that evening.

Please, out in the open—imploringly—where there's grass and trees and lots of sky and stars. Wistfully—it would be nice for a change.

They went to the Movie Theater. They laughed and danced under the bright flashing lights of Palace Avenue. They pushed and jostled their film-intoxicated companions who jostled them in return. Time once again was suspended, now a globule of stagnant water on a fine silken thread.

PHYLLIS COHEN

"Far Above Cayuga's Waters"

The Cornell library tower loomed ahead and to the left, leering at us through the hot, dusty-blue air. Its supercilious I'm-here-you're-there aspect convinced us that we ought to turn right along the winding road.

Old, imposing Gothic buildings—cloaked in the anonymity of gray stone, without need of titles in their time-tested security—sped past our car. Suddenly, the archaic, tomb-like buildings gave way to Quonset huts, steel-gray and built of corrugated tinfoil. These evidences of campus modernization led to glass-roofed hothouses which optimistically stood ready to receive the rays of the sun. The machine age was represented here, too. In bright-yellow and dull-brown paint an egg-dispensing machine reared its head. A distance behind this ungainly mechanism stood the poultry-judging building which, happily, retreated deeper into the mist as we sped along.

Suddenly, the exit to town appeared in the road ahead of us, so we made a left turn in a desperate effort to find the main campus. After we had covered quite some distance along the muddy road, crossed a narrow bridge, and gotten to a point where no U-turns were possible we spied a road sign. Its presence was obviously a mistake for we had seen no others since entering the campus grounds. Anyhow, there was the sign, promising us a directional clue. At a glance we knew where we were—the Cornell Plantations.

Convinced by now that the outskirts of the university were 99% of the whole, we blundered along again until we found ourselves in the midst of sunbathing girls and boys. They were assembled in groups on the lawns in front of Greek-lettered houses, and looked as though the only thing that could disturb their placidity would be the sound of a schoolbell.

Refusing to bow to the obvious, we decided to interpret this as an encouraging sign of sophisticated university civilization, and kept on going in the general direction that we were then following. After many rights, considerably more lefts, and three more entrances into the plantations, we found ourselves in front of the tennis courts. Adventurers to the end, we got out to look at the buildings nearby, and there was the one we sought. A notice, however, pointed us in another direction to the building which was open that day. Leaving the car where it was, we set off at a brisk trot across the quadrangle of grass whose green beauty was interrupted only by a dirty, gray tombstone which bore the legend, "Interpares." Diagonally across from this was the building which was our goal, and one block behind it was the library tower greeting us with its I'm-here-you're-there leer.

MADELINE GELTMAN

Reveler

Securely cloaked by the steady speed of life,
Everywhere surrounded by the sensual pleasures of Birth and Love, Pride and Accomplishment,
I am suddenly assailed by a slow moving force, more
Sweet and more powerful than Today and Now,
A masterly force that permeates my every sense.
Almost swiftly, it bolts shut the door behind it
(and there are the lights and people, only swirling bars of color crazily tilted against a fast fading pattern).

We (the fair-locked youth and I)
Drink deeply of the filled night air.
And my thoughts are of the coarse-grained woman who had borne
This single, perfect thing,
And of the thronged and passionate masses,
Who surged forth, sounding the molded trumpet of their own will and rose to the heights.
Of whispered summer nights and the musings of poets,
Of the low, restless desires that forever prod and provoke
Man, a reminder of his self-imposed frailties.
Wordless, we strode the soft sanded beach, as the music of Night and sea and sky sounded its myriad cascade of Full and glorious notes.
(I a reveler in this unblemished pattern of things.)

But timeless dawn, the dawn of cities and kitchens,
Noted our solitary figures, black against the Bright waterfall of her domain, and she
Snatched the stars and quiet from us,
And he from me.
Doors clank (open or shut, I wonder),
Naked and cold and alone,
I am soon warm, covered by my fur-lined cloak
And set down among the slow swirling streaks of color.
Slowly, they stop their incessant cycling and I then
Move with them, touch them, embrace them—
Curious, busy peace.
Unconsciously, midst the red mouths and gleaming, cool
Corridors, I am waiting.

Two Views of Success

I fear I've nothing more to wish for
I've reached the goal, to which I no longer aspire
And now I must sit back and watch the world,
I must learn, as I have heard, to "live a little"
I will listen to music and read books only.
Then when I am very comfortable and peaceful
I shall die.

I've been dying since I was born
So I shall not wait for death.
Even though I have gained much from life
I will continue to want and to strive
I will continue to work for something I have not
For all a man must do to achieve success
Is to beat life to the finish line.

DAVID GARFIELD

In Memoriam

Looking out the window
Over and beyond the houses and treetops,
Beyond the horizon—
Until life spiraling downward, alights on
A tiny pinpoint of memory
That grows larger and larger.

Vibrant and glowing memories
Of one dear departed
Never to be seen, heard, or felt again—
Only loved, longed for,
Cherished deeply in a broken heart.

Appreciation often comes too late
When one can no longer compensate
For thoughtlessness.
A heritage, a proud and glorious heritage
That must be carried on.

ALAN. S. FLEISCHER

SPORTS SECTION

Sports have long symbolized the strength and vitality of youth. But it is not physical strength alone that is required. An alert mind, teamwork, and skill are the contributing factors without which the very essence and purpose of sports would be lost.

BASKETBALL

The hoopsters, under the guidance of Coach Jack Gordon, ended their 1957-58 season with a league record of 7-5. High scorers for the season were Captain Norm Halberstadt, who averaged 22 points a game, and Joe Bellontine, who averaged 15 points a game.

The most impressive victory of the season was a 92-73 "rack-up" against Lafayette and the most exciting game was the one against Van Buren High School, in which the Utes edged out a 73-72 victory in overtime.

Individual player honors include the selection of Norm Halberstadt as All-City guard and honorable mention citations for Tom Fink and Joe Bellontine.

With the graduation of many team members, Coach Gordon feels that next year's job will be one of "rebuilding." Graduating this year are Captains Norm Halberstadt and Tom Fink, Joe Bellontine, Philip Figelman, Richie Parenti, Artie Rosdeitscher, Spencer Ross, and Jay Udell.

FOOTBALL

The football team ended its 1957-58 season with a 2-5-0 record. The two victories were attained by defeating Madison, 14-13, and shutting out Tilden, 6-0.

Coach Sy Rapp feels that these results are not disappointing because four of the games were lost by only one touchdown. "A successful team," says Coach Rapp, "requires several seasons of experience and hard work. With the fine assistance of Mr. Silberg and Mr. Lucks (the assistant coaches), the increased student support, and the expected return of most of the varsity players, we should have an improved team."

Graduating this year are Captains Charley Conigliaro and Ronny Radice, Ben Alalouf, Vinny Angelico, Adrian Bardazzi, Vinny Mallozzi, Pat Portera, and Joel Torres.

BOWLING

Finishing in third place with a 6-4 record, the Ute keglers completed one of their most successful seasons in recent years. High scorer for the season was Vincent Ingrate, who averaged 152 per game. (This is the first time in four years that a Ute player has averaged over 150.) Artie Zinkin came close with a 148 average.

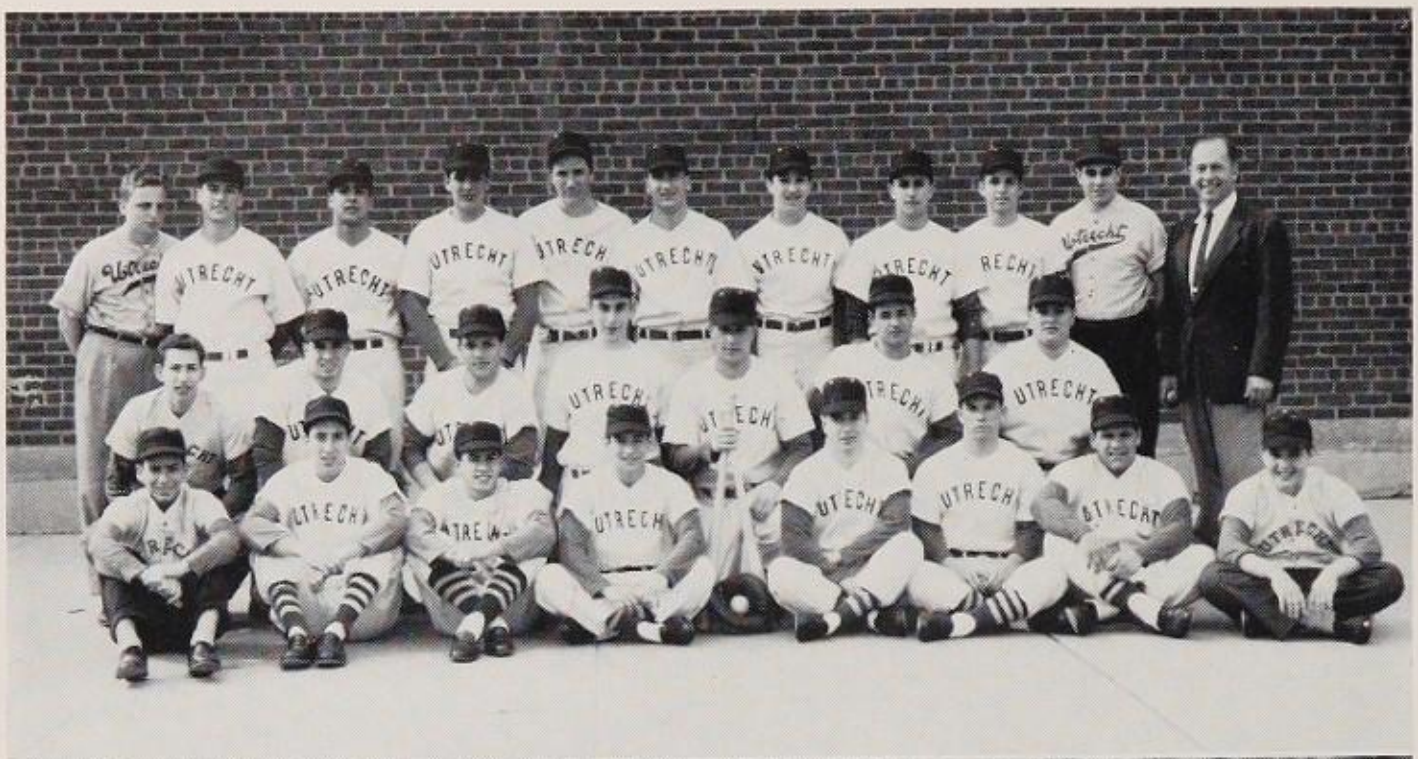
Coach Jerry Rizzo is especially proud of the team's victory over Fort Hamilton which ended that school's nine-game winning streak.

Graduating members are Bing Eng and Artie Zinkin.

BASKETBALL TEAM

FOOTBALL TEAM

BASEBALL, TRACK, and HANDBALL TEAMS



BASEBALL

This year's season proved to be a disappointing one for the Ute baseball team. The batsmen compiled an overall record of 3-7.

Highlighting the season was a 3-0 shutout over Manual. The other two victories were against Fort Hamilton 3-1, and Lincoln 7-6. In two of these three games, Richie Rubino pitched the team's way to victory.

Coach Abe Felcher feels that the boys were hampered by inexperience and will make a much better showing next year.

Graduating in June are Sherwin Bogart, Tom Fink, and two team managers, Norm Nachbar and Al Revkin, who have contributed greatly to the publicity campaigns of all Utrecht teams.

TRACK

Culminating a successful season, both indoor and outdoor, the mile relay team broke novice in the P.S.A.L. Invitation Meet held at Madison Square Garden in February. The milers consist of Lenny Furman, Herb Greenblum, Joe Kleiner, and Ronny Reisman. Also breaking novice was shotputter Richie Montalbano.

During the outdoor season, the cindermen triumphed over Lafayette 48-33, capturing almost all of the first, second, and third place honors.

This year's June graduates among the tracksters are Captains Al Corsaro and Marty Hornstein, Dave Blum, Lenny Furman, Howie Gabler, Joe Kleiner, Stu Waxman, and Manager Steve Ackerman.

GOLF

For the first time in many years, the golf team compiled a winning record (5-4). Coach Irv Goldberg feels that next year the group will fare even better.

Graduating members of the team are Bob Feola, Larry Fornasieri, Don Glantz, and Steve Ackerman.

HANDBALL

For the seventh consecutive year, the Ute wallmen clinched an undisputed championship. The team's record was 5-3.

The season's highlights for the team, which was coached by Mr. Abe Rifkin, assisted by Mr. Suozzo, were a 5-0 shutout over Fort Hamilton and a 3-2 victory over Midwood which gave New Utrecht the crown.

Graduating this year are Captains Eli Gottlieb and Lenny Schaier, Bing Eng, Murray Goldberg, and Ronnie Radice.

SWIMMING

With the loss of more than half of their varsity through graduation and the Asian flu, the Ute mermen ended the 1957-58 season with a 3-8 record.

Highlighting the season were a 55-7 romp to victory over Alexander Hamilton and a 47-20 victory over Wingate. It is interesting to note that for the first time in many years every man who swam for Utrecht scored in both meets.

A medley team of Gabor Katz (backstroke), Don Glantz (butterfly), and Barry Litofsky (freestyle) placed eighth in the City Championships. At the Harrigan meets Don Glantz placed seventh in the city with the backstroke, and freestylers Barry Litofsky and Mel Bobson reached the semi-finals.

Coach Frank MacDavitt feels that the team's performance will be improved next year since most of the varsity members are returning. Mr. "Mac" would like to see a better turnout for the coming fall season.

Graduating this year are Captains Don Glantz and Barry Litofsky, Ray Kelly, Lenny Segal, Stu Selkin, and Steve Tannenbaum. Dave Schneier, manager, is also a June graduate.

SOCCER, FENCING, and TENNIS

Three new teams have been added to the extra-curricular activities at New Utrecht. They are: soccer, coached by Mr. Abe Rifkin; fencing, coached by Mr. Leonard Lucks; and tennis, under the guidance of Mr. I. Cohen.

These teams have been gathering boys for their rosters and will begin regular P.S.A.L. competition in the fall. Any boys seriously interested in these teams are advised to consult the respective coaches.

From Our Alumni Association

We welcome you most heartily to the ranks of our Alumni Association.

The New Utrecht High School Alumni Association was incorporated in July 1943 as a membership corporation under the laws of the state of New York. Since the date of incorporation and the first Board of Directors meeting held on December 14, 1943, the Alumni Association has come a long way. From its inception, the association has dedicated itself to the affairs of the school, alumni, and community.

Our Scholarship Fund, Employment Placement Service, Reunion Dinners, etc. are geared for the benefit of Utrecht alumni. The Association takes justifiable pride in having inaugurated and supported these undertakings making it a working organization, helping our Alma Mater and fellow alumni.

We are more than proud of those of our alumni who have prominently established themselves in practically every field of endeavor, i.e., judiciary, medicine, law, government, teaching, etc., who have participated in laying the groundwork of the association and have continued through the years to lend their support. We also boast the largest number of show business performers of any alumni group, including Abe Burrows, Arnold Stang, Buddy Hackett, Robert Merrill, Richard Tucker, Doretta Morrow, and other notables.

It would take many more pages than allotted here to set forth the accomplishments, workings, and future goals of the Association.

As the Association takes on more responsibilities and its growth increases, the support of every alumnus is needed. Now that you have graduated, you are automatically eligible to participate in the Association and "reap the harvest" it has to offer. Those of you who are active in school affairs have the largest responsibility of all in acting as liaison between your class and the Association to see that your class is active. This can be done by following the steps listed below:

1. Keep up to date on your dues ($1.00 per year or $10 for Life Membership). Your dues make the Association possible; without it, no mailings, no activities. Make checks payable to the N.U.H.S. Alumni Association, 1601 80th Street, Brooklyn 14, N. Y.
2. Support the Meyer Weiner Memorial Scholarship Fund of the Alumni Association.
3. Attend Council meetings once a month. We discuss alumni affairs and plan alumni functions. The Council meetings are also social get-togethers after the short business sessions, and refreshments are served.
4. Inform us immediately of change of address.
5. Volunteer for various Alumni activities.
6. Send personal news items for the "Alumni Newsletter."
7. Form a class committee as representatives to the Association.
8. All comments and inquires should be sent to the Association at 1601 80th Street, Brooklyn 14, N. Y., or call BE 2-6388.

We wish you all the best of luck in your hopes and ambitions.
